

Same accredited degree. A fraction of the cost.

A personal coach helps you earn most of your bachelor's from home through exams and self-paced courses. Then you transfer to a regionally accredited university, finish online, and graduate.

Built for college students wanting a degree without drowning in debt, high schoolers earning a bachelor's alongside their diploma, homeschool families, and working adults. Already have credits? Your coach builds around them.

Average total cost and time to earn a bachelor's degree

Traditional college

4.5 years

$100,000 to $180,000+

Community college + transfer

5 years

$65,000 to $80,000

Do College Differently

2.5 years

$11,000 to $22,000

That total covers $100 a month with us plus exam fees (free options exist), then about $10,000 to $20,000 at the university to finish. Financial aid is often available.

How it works

1

Plan

Meet your coach, talk through your goals and major, and see your whole path before you join.

2

Earn

Earn most credits from home with CLEP and DSST exams and self-paced courses like Sophia.

3

Graduate

Transfer to Thomas Edison, Charter Oak, or Excelsior. Finish your last 30 to 40 credits online.

What your $100 a month gets you

A coach for your whole degree. Meet or message on Zoom, phone, or text as often as you want.

Accountability. Most people quit when they lose momentum. Your coach keeps you moving.

The cheapest route to every credit. Study resources, plus free or discounted CLEP exams.

A progress dashboard. Your credits, requirements, and pace in one place.

I used alternative credit to graduate early for a fraction of the cost. So did my brother-in-law and many close friends. Most people never hear this path exists, so I built DCD to be a personal trainer for your college degree.
